What is a Business Secured Credit Card?

A business secured credit card is a type of credit card backed by a cash deposit made by the cardholder. This deposit serves as collateral and typically determines the credit limit of the card. For instance, if you deposit $1,000, your credit limit will likely be set at that amount. The Bank of America business secured credit card allows small business owners to establish or rebuild their credit while offering features tailored for business needs. This card is designed for those who may not be eligible for traditional unsecured credit cards, making it an ideal choice for startups or businesses recovering from financial difficulties.

How it Works

When you apply for a business secured credit card from Bank of America, you will need to provide a cash deposit. This deposit is held in a secure account and is refundable if you close your account in good standing. The card functions like a regular credit card, allowing you to make purchases, pay bills, and earn rewards, all while using the credit limit established by your deposit. Your payment history is reported to major credit bureaus, which can help you build or improve your business credit score over time.
