History of Makati Central Business District

The Makati Central Business District has a rich history that dates back to the pre-colonial period when it was primarily an agrarian community. The area was transformed significantly during the American colonial period when the government began to develop infrastructure and establish business establishments. By the 1960s, the Makati area was designated as a business district, and the Makati Development Corporation was formed to oversee its development.

Throughout the decades, Makati CBD has evolved into a modern metropolis, attracting both local and foreign investors. The establishment of the Makati Stock Exchange in 1963 marked a significant milestone, solidifying its status as the country's financial center. As the economy grew, so did the skyline, with the construction of iconic buildings such as the Ayala Tower One and the Greenbelt complex, which became synonymous with Makati's image as a bustling business hub.

Economic Importance of Makati CBD

Makati Central Business District plays a vital role in the Philippine economy, contributing significantly to the nation's GDP. It is home to numerous multinational corporations, banks, and financial institutions. The district alone houses over 1,000 businesses, including major players in the finance, technology, and retail sectors.

The economic activities within Makati CBD generate thousands of jobs, attracting a diverse workforce from various backgrounds. The area is also known for its high real estate values, making it one of the most sought-after locations for business operations. This economic dynamism is reflected in the continuous growth of office spaces, commercial establishments, and residential developments.

Key Economic Sectors in Makati

The economy of Makati CBD is supported by several key sectors:

- Finance and Banking: Home to the headquarters of major banks and investment firms.
- Information Technology: A growing hub for tech companies and startups.
- Retail: High-end shopping malls and boutiques attract both locals and tourists.
