Based partly on unpublished documents and oral information obtained from monks who headed major monasteries on mainland China, Holmes Welch presents a detailed description of the modern practice of Chinese Buddhism. Focusing on the actual rather than the theoretical observances of the religion, he gives an exhaustive account of the monastic system and the style of life of both monk and layman. His study makes new information available for the Western reader and calls into question the whole concept of the moribund state of Chinese Buddhism.

The idea behind The Mortals is more about creating an effect through both narration and dialogue than anything else, the effect being for the reader to be under the impression of listening to a book and not feeling the difficulty and constraint of reading it. The intent of this book is to talk about interesting things in an amusing and entertaining manner and I think that's the readership this book will attract. As concerns the plot of the novel it involves and forever evolves around the concept of youth unemployment, having said that it needs to be stated that there are a few points of topography, nationality but no religious beliefs are mentioned in the work. As concerns the concept of youth unemployment it's in reference to my (Serb) generations way in which they go about the business of what I allude to in the novel (and this can only be inferred) as earning a living. The novel ends with Landin Lander and Nata Tesora making a baby despite the society's falling apart.
