Shalom Auslander was raised with a terrified respect for God. Even as he grew up and was estranged from his community, his religion and its traditions, he could not find the path to a life where he didn't struggle daily with the fear of God's formidable wrath. Foreskin's Lament reveals Auslander's "painfully, cripplingly, incurably, miserably religious" youth in a strict, socially isolated Orthodox Jewish community, and recounts his rebellion and efforts to make a new life apart from it. His combination of unrelenting humor and anger renders a rich and fascinating portrait of a man grappling with his faith and family.

black tail magazine: The Street Life Series: Is It Passion or Revenge? Kevin M. Weeks, 2008-01-17 When the pieces of a masterfully crafted puzzle are scattered all over Washington D.C. and P.G. County Maryland, quick witted and statuesque D.C. Detective Hanae Troop must uncover who is responsible for leaving colorful deadly weapons at each crime scene. The killer, who goes by the name of The Paradox, is on a mission to murder D.C.s #1 male exotic dancers, all for a personal vendetta that stretches all the way back to Philadelphia. There is national attention because of a highly visible protest right in the middle of the U.S. Capitol lawn. For sure, the Feds are out to take over the case from D.C.s Homicide Division. The outstanding reputation of the department rests on the shoulders of Detective Troop. Will she discover that the killings are tied to Teco Jackson, who is known as a snitch in the City of Brotherly Love? Or will Detective Troop find that these crimes stem from a jealous rage? One thing is certain. Teco is wedged in the middle of the Chocolate City's most infamous murders; and Detective Troop has to decide if she is going to cuff Teco or protect him. Ultimately, she finds herself in a strange predicament when she comes face to face with The Paradox. The question remains, are these crimes of passion or revenge? black tail magazine: Ladies Night Davis Zebrowski, 2025-03-26 In the chaotic atmosphere of a bustling nightclub, DaShawn, a bartender, navigates the raucous banter of his male stripper friends, Andrew and Kevin. Their lewd jokes about women and sex create a lighthearted but volatile environment. DaShawn juggles drink orders but struggles to maintain professionalism while dealing with his friends' antics. The night turns dramatic when Jessica, DaShawn's girlfriend, storms into the bar, demanding his attention. Their interaction is tense as Jessica's frustration with DaShawn's lifestyle and his friendships with Andrew and Kevin come to a head. Just as the club's noise reaches a crescendo, Jessica drops a bombshell—she's pregnant. Confused and taken aback, DaShawn grapples with the news, questioning how it happened despite her claims of being on birth control. The emotional weight of impending fatherhood hits him hard, leading to a heated argument. Jessica's anger and disappointment drive her to storm out, leaving DaShawn in shock and regret. He chases after her, desperate to understand and resolve the situation, but she disappears into the crowd and out of his life for good. Eight years later, now living as a male stripper and a bachelor, DaShawn receives a dreadful knock on the door regarding a child he is being forced to raise as a single parent. This fictional work intertwines moments of humor, drama, and the harsh realities of relationships, showcasing the complexity of love, friendship, and unexpected responsibilities in a nightclub's vibrant yet chaotic setting, leading to a house they were forced to call home.

black tail magazine: Stephen Goldfinger, 2009-08-01 Thirty-year-old David Freid isn't sure what to do with his life. He hates his job as a clerical assistant at the City University of New York, and his monologues as a stand-up comedian twice a week at Patti's Caf aren't well received. In addition to suffering from chronic prostatitis, he can't find a girl. The turning point comes when David discovers a photograph of his urologist's daughter, Kara Rosenblum. Despite the fact that she doesn't know he exists, he becomes convinced they are meant to be together. At the same time, an elusive talent scout from Comedy World is expected to make a surprise appearance at the club where David performs. The problem is that nobody knows if the scout is legitimate or not. In a moment of clarity, David decides that if he can get the urologist's daughter and the talent scout to both show up at his Saturday night gig, he will not only get discovered but win the love of the girl with whom he is obsessed.

black tail magazine: Postcolonial Hauntologies: African Women's Discourses of the Female Body Ayo A. Coly, 2019-06-01 Postcolonial Hauntologies is an interdisciplinary and comparative analysis of critical, literary, visual, and performance texts by women from different parts of Africa. While contemporary critical thought and feminist theory have largely integrated the sexual female body into their disciplines, colonial representations of African women's sexuality "haunt" contemporary postcolonial African scholarship which—by maintaining a culture of avoidance about women's sexuality—generates a discursive conscription that ultimately holds the female body hostage. Ayo A. Coly employs the concept of "hauntology" and "ghostly matters" to formulate an explicative framework in which to examine postcolonial silences surrounding the African female body as well as a theoretical framework for discerning the elusive and cautious presences of female sexuality in the texts of African women. In illuminating the pervasive silence about the sexual female body in postcolonial African scholarship, Postcolonial Hauntologies challenges hostile responses to critical and artistic voices that suggest the African female body represents sacred ideological-discursive ground on which one treads carefully, if at all. Coly demonstrates how “ghosts” from the colonial past are countered by discursive engagements with explicit representations of women’s sexuality and bodies that emphasize African women’s power and autonomy.
