Overview of 1 Corinthians 13 in Coffman's Commentary

The Coffman commentary on 1 Corinthians 13 begins by situating the chapter within the broader context of Paul's first letter to the Corinthians. Paul addresses a community struggling with divisions and spiritual pride, emphasizing that love is the foundation of Christian conduct. Coffman underscores that this chapter serves as a corrective to the Corinthians' emphasis on spiritual gifts like prophecy and tongues. The commentary highlights the chapter's poetic style, which differs from the more argumentative tone of surrounding chapters. This stylistic choice serves to elevate the concept of love beyond mere doctrine into an ideal to be passionately pursued.

Context and Purpose

Coffman explains that Paul wrote 1 Corinthians 13 to balance the Corinthians' enthusiasm for spiritual gifts with a reminder that without love, such gifts are meaningless. The commentary views the chapter as a theological and ethical centerpiece of the letter, designed to unify believers around the indispensable virtue of love.

Literary Structure and Style

The commentary notes the chapter's unique structure, with its rhythmic and poetic qualities, which enhance the emotional appeal. Coffman points out that Paul uses vivid metaphors and a series of progressive contrasts to define love, making the passage memorable and impactful.

The Primacy of Love Over Spiritual Gifts

A central theme in Coffman commentary 1 Corinthians 13 is the supremacy of love compared to spiritual gifts. Paul emphasizes that spiritual gifts, no matter how spectacular, are worthless without love. Coffman highlights verses 1 through 3 as Paul's way of illustrating that eloquence, prophecy, knowledge, and faith are incomplete and ineffective if not motivated by love.

Spiritual Gifts Described

The commentary enumerates the gifts mentioned by Paul, including:

- Speaking in tongues
- Prophecy
- Knowledge
- Faith capable of moving mountains
- Charitable acts and sacrifices

Coffman stresses that these gifts, while valuable, are secondary to the practice of love.

Love as the Superior Gift

Coffman explains that love is not just another spiritual gift but the very essence and goal of all Christian life and service. Without love, spiritual achievements are hollow and fail to reflect God's nature.

Characteristics of Love According to Coffman

One of the most detailed aspects of Coffman commentary 1 corinthians 13 is the exposition of the attributes of love as described by Paul. Verses 4 through 7 list nine key characteristics that define true love. Coffman provides a thorough explanation of each trait, reflecting on their practical and theological significance.

Attributes of Love

- Patient: Love endures hardship and delays without frustration.
- Kind: Love actively seeks to do good to others.
- Does not envy: Love is free from jealousy and resentment.
- Does not boast: Love is humble and free from self-promotion.
- Is not proud: Love avoids arrogance and conceit.
- Does not dishonor others: Love respects and honors others.
- Is not self-seeking: Love prioritizes others over oneself.
- Is not easily angered: Love maintains calm and forgiveness.
- Keeps no record of wrongs: Love forgives and forgets offenses.

Coffman points out that these attributes form a comprehensive portrait of love that is both ethical and relational, serving as a model for Christian behavior.

Love's Endurance and Hope

In addition to the nine characteristics, Paul declares that love "always protects, always trusts, always hopes, always perseveres." Coffman emphasizes these as expressions of love's steadfastness and unwavering commitment, even in the face of challenges.

The Eternal Nature of Love

Coffman commentary 1 corinthians 13 highlights the eternal aspect of love as a key theological insight from the chapter. Paul contrasts love with spiritual gifts by stressing that gifts like prophecy, tongues, and knowledge will cease, but love endures forever. The commentary explains that this distinction elevates love beyond temporal phenomena to an everlasting virtue.

Temporary Gifts Versus Eternal Love

Coffman explains that spiritual gifts served a specific purpose for the early church's edification but were partial and incomplete. Love, however, is perfect and permanent, reflecting the unchanging nature of God himself. This understanding encourages believers to prioritize love as their ultimate spiritual pursuit.

Love as the Greatest Virtue

According to Coffman, Paul's declaration that love is the greatest underscores its supreme importance in Christian theology and practice. Love embodies the fulfillment of the law and the essence of the gospel message.

Practical Applications from Coffman's Analysis

The practical implications of Coffman commentary 1 corinthians 13 are significant for contemporary Christian living. The commentary encourages believers to cultivate love as the foundation of all spiritual activity and interpersonal relationships.

Love as the Guiding Principle

Coffman urges that love should govern how Christians use their spiritual gifts, interact with others, and approach service. Genuine love ensures that actions are motivated by compassion and humility rather than pride or self-interest.

Steps to Cultivate Love

The commentary suggests several ways to develop the qualities of love Paul describes:

1. Practice patience and kindness in daily interactions.
2. Reject envy and boastfulness by focusing on others' needs.
3. Foster humility and avoid prideful attitudes.
4. Maintain forgiveness and avoid keeping records of offenses.
5. Persevere in hope and trust even amid difficulties.

These practical steps align believers with the biblical model of love and promote spiritual maturity.

God sent Jesus, not only to die as our Savior, but also to reveal an authoritative message for our salvation. Jesus then transferred this message to the apostles. Guided by the Holy Spirit, they in turn preached this message, which is now preserved in the New Testament. This is our standard today.

coffman commentary 1 corinthians 13: All Power to the Lamb James R. Johnson, 2010-12 Book Summary If you were God, writing a book you wanted men to understand, would you write it in such a way that men would have to make up meaning in order to understand it, or would you write it in such a way that those that seek to understand could actually come to a knowledge of its truth (Mt 7:7)? The present commentary takes the position that God wrote Revelation in such a way that with sufficient effort and intellectual honesty, readers can understand it. Certainly there are symbols in Revelation, but when God does use symbols, He provides inspired interpretations of the symbols. This commentary seeks to avoid the mistakes of the views that use the symbolical approach to Revelation (preterist, continuous historical, spiritualist, and idealist). These approaches suffer from two basic flaws: assuming the text is symbolical when it is not and making up meaning regarding the text based on stream of consciousness word association, much as one would do looking at Rorschach inkblots. This commentary seeks to avoid telling God what He should have said and strives to understand what God actually meant. Of all the approaches to understanding Revelation, this commentary is most closely aligned with the dispensationalist (premillennialist) view in that it views Revelation from a literalist, futurist perspective. It is different from the typical dispensationalist schema in that it views the seven seals as the powers of the Lamb, understands the exercise of the powers of the seven seals to be simultaneous processes, and casts chapters 8-22 as three parallel prophecies of the Lamb's power over the course of the histories of Israel, the nations, and the saints. This commentary also makes use of many of the non-canonical works that provide insight into the spirit world and detail regarding the end of the present age.

coffman commentary 1 corinthians 13: Just Follow Jesus Billy Joseph Stines, 2019-12-18

Who were the men called by Jesus? Among the twelve disciples were two sets of brothers – Peter and Andrew, James and John – and a man named Matthew. If we were selecting individuals to follow Jesus, these men would have never been on our list. But Jesus saw something in them we could never see. Peter, Andrew, James, and John made their livelihood fishing in the Sea of Galilee. Matthew collected taxes for the hated Roman empire. Each was an average man just going about his daily business. But Jesus turned their lives upside down by calling to them, saying, “Follow me.” Just as his call changed their lives, it can change your life, too. Billy Joseph Stines, who served almost forty years at six churches scattered around North and South Carolina, explores why you should listen to the call of Jesus. He also urges readers to stop dismissing those parts of the Bible that do not fit their idea of who God is. Instead of seeking peace through compromise, the goal must be to discover the truth – Jesus Christ.

coffman commentary 1 corinthians 13: Restoring the First-century Church in the Twenty-first Century Warren Lewis, Hans Rollmann, 2005-10-15 'Restoring the First-century Church in the Twenty-first Century: Essays on the Stone-Campbell Restoration Movement in Honor of Don Haymes' is a snap-shot of a major American religious movement just after the turn of the millennium. When the 'Disciples' of Alexander Campbell and the 'Christians' of Barton Warren Stone joined forces early in the 19th century, the first indigenous ecumenical movement in the United States came into being. Two hundred years later, this American experiment in biblical primitivism has resulted in three, possibly four, large segments. Best known is the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), active wherever ecumenical Christians gather. The denomination is typically theologically open, having been reshaped by theological Liberalism and the Social Gospel in the twentieth century, and has been re-organized on the model of other Protestant bodies. The largest group, the Churches of Christ, easily distinguished by their insistence on 'a cappella' music (singing only), is theologically conservative, now tending towards the evangelical, and congregationally autonomous, though with a denominational sense of brotherhood. The Christian Churches/Churches of Christ (Independent) are a 'via media' between the two other bodies: theologically conservative and evangelical, congregationally autonomous, pastorally oriented, and comfortable with instrumental music. The fourth numerically significant group, the churches of Christ (Anti-Institutional), is a conservative reaction to the 'a cappella' churches, much in the way that the Southern 'a capella' churches reacted against the emerging intellectual culture and social location, instrumental music and institutional centrism of the Northern Disciples following the Civil War. Besides these four, numerous smaller fragments, typically one-article splinter groups, decorate the history of the Restoration Movement: One-Cup brethren, Premillennialists, No-Sunday-School congregations, No-Located-Precacher churches, and others. This movement to unite Christians on the basis of faith and immersion in Jesus Christ, and to restore New-Testament Christianity, is too little recognized on the American religious landscape, and it has been too little studied by the academic community. This volume is focused primarily on the 'a cappella' churches and their interests, but implications for the entire Stone-Campbell Restoration Movement abound. The voices that speak freely within were unimpeded in authoring these essays by standards of orthodoxy imposed from without. All of the contributors are acquainted with Don Haymes, the honoree of the volume, and have been inspired by this friend and colleague, a man with a rigorous and earthy intellect and a heavenly spirit.
