What Is Daily Hukamnama?

The daily hukamnama is a scripture-based edict or divine command taken from the Guru Granth Sahib, the eternal Guru of the Sikhs. Every day, a specific hymn (shabad) is selected as the hukamnama to provide spiritual guidance to devotees. The word “hukam” means order or command, and “nama” refers to a message, making the hukamnama a sacred directive for daily living. It is traditionally read at the Golden Temple (Harmandir Sahib) in Amritsar and other Gurdwaras worldwide.

Definition and Purpose

The primary purpose of the daily hukamnama is to offer words of wisdom, encouragement, and reflection to Sikhs. It serves as a spiritual compass, directing followers towards righteous actions, humility, and devotion. The hukamnama is treated as a divine instruction, not just a scripture reading, emphasizing its importance in Sikh religious practice.

Daily Ritual and Practice

In most Sikh congregations, the hukamnama is read aloud during the morning prayer service. Devotees listen attentively to absorb its meaning and contemplate how it applies to their lives. The daily hukamnama thus forms an essential part of Sikh worship and community life.

Historical Context of Hukamnama

The tradition of issuing hukamnamas dates back to the times of the Sikh Gurus, who used these edicts to guide their followers in matters of faith, social conduct, and community governance. Over time, the hukamnama evolved into a formal religious practice involving the Guru Granth Sahib.

Origins in Sikh Gurus' Teachings

Originally, hukamnamas were written orders or letters from the Sikh Gurus to their followers. These commands addressed issues ranging from spiritual guidance to practical decisions in the Sikh community. The daily hukamnama as currently practiced derives from this early tradition of seeking divine instruction.

Evolution into Daily Scripture Reading

With the installation of the Guru Granth Sahib as the eternal Guru in 1708, the hukamnama became a scripture-based daily reading. The practice of randomly opening the Guru Granth Sahib to select a hymn for the day symbolizes seeking the Guru's will and wisdom directly.

For Sikh devotees, the daily hukamnama acts as a source of inspiration and guidance. It encourages meditation on divine virtues and helps individuals navigate challenges with faith and resilience.

The selection of the daily hukamnama follows a traditional process that emphasizes spiritual randomness and divine will. This ensures that the message chosen resonates with the needs of the community on that particular day.
