what to do with old textbooks from college: Unfolding Spatial Movements in the Second-Hand Book Market in Kolkata Diti Bhattacharya, 2023-12-01 This insightful book unfolds the boipara, exploring the acts of thinking and writing about space and place in the context of recent key conversations at the intersections of cultural geographies, mobilities, materialities and heritage studies. This book reconsiders how we can think about space, place and spatialisation using the book market as a case study. Focusing on everyday lived and imagined experiences within the space, it provides insights into the intricacies, complexities and mobilities involved in the many ways in which temporal, material, structural and sensorial experiences of spaces are inter-implicated. As expression and method, this work aims to be a writing of space (rather than a writing about space) produced through the interleaving of the author's lived spatial experience of the boipara with the stories, experiences and memories of other regulars who have used and continue to use it, along with the non-human materialities and mobilities that characterise it. This book is essential reading for a wide international audience, particularly those interested in the evolving discussions on mobility, or writing about space and place, materiality, assemblage theory and heritage spaces in the South Asian context.

Hurley, 2020-06-12 This volume takes a comprehensive and broad look at e-text programs across a wide spectrum of programs, institutions, and policies in three parts. The first part showcases several policy papers to contextualize the discussion and highlight the reasons for IAE programs' structure and the obstacles they face for implementation. The second part is an in-depth exploration of various case studies that provide a detailed description of IAE programs, including information about program elements, program structure, program size, and insights into how programs are operationalized, and their shortcomings and benefits to students and stakeholders. The final part is a selection of research papers that offer evidence-based support for the adoption of IAE programs in terms of student success, access, engagement, costs, and a variety of other student and institutional outcomes. There are approximately 300 institutions of higher education that currently have some form of Inclusive Access or Open Educational Resources E-text (IAE) program in the United States, but there is little scholarship that engages on the topic of assessing these programs' effect on student success. The results of the research studies included in this volume will inform faculty, administrators, and policy-makers who seek to support the development, adoption, and implementation of IAE programs based on their potential positive effects on student success and other outcomes.

what to do with old textbooks from college: Hands Up America Dennis J. Haut (Blackie), 2014-03-28 This book deals with the author's attempt to change America's system of education. For the past two-hundred and fifty years, teaching has been about the same. Teachers have given information to their students that the teachers want the students to know and be tested on. Most of these teachers have used the same text and teaching materials over their career. From Haut's many contacts and taking a long hard look at his own professional teaching career, he believes it is time to make teaching changes for the twenty-first century. You might not agree with all the author's proposals but they make a lot of sense. Teachers will no longer teach to the middle of the pack. By doing this, they are losing most of their students along the way. They are either above most of the students heads or so boring to the advanced students, reaching each and every students at their level of understanding with modern and new technology is something that's needed by all concerned. After reading this book, you can decide for yourself.
